Best auctioneer in town

Walter Jones of WJ Auction Service. Walter recently graduated from Western College of Auctioneering in Bozeman, Montana. Photos courtesy of WCA and Walter Jones

Ok, so he might be the only auctioneer in town, but there's no doubt he's one of the best ones around! Walter Jones, out of Gatzke, has been making a name for himself as an auctioneer for quite a few years already. However, he's officially earned the title as he recently graduated from Western College of Auctioneering in Bozeman, Montana. Of his new endeavor, Walter, a '22 graduate of Grygla High School, shared, "Growing up, I lived for going to the sale barn with my grandpa and listening to the auction chant. I soon fell in love with the auction business and the auction method of marketing, and I believe it is the best way to sell assets and find true price discovery. That being said, I have decided to start up WJ Auction Service." WJ Auction is a full-service auction company that offers to sell many assets, such as: farm equipment and machinery, livestock, estate and personal property, and benefit and charity auctions. Walter says, "If it's for sale, we can sell it!" Folks have been seeing his familiar face at quite a few sale events over the years. Walter first started doing auctions here and there when he was in junior high. Over the years, he's taken the mic at a few benefit auctions, the Goodridge Consignment Sale, Freedom Festival, the Firemen's Supper, Pennington County and Roseau County Fairs, and even at the sale barn a couple of times. Earlier this summer, Walter traveled to Montana to make things official. Of the auctioneering college there, he said it's the best one in the country and really enjoyed the experience. While there, the class took on a project that would benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Each student was asked to bring three items to sell to their class. For some, it was their first time selling at a real auction. All money raised benefits St. Jude's. The class set a new St. Jude charity auction record for WCA, raising $8,694.00 at the student auction. Coming up, Riverfront Station, out of Wannaska, is having their first annual consignment auction in Wannaska on September 16, 2023. WJ Auction Service will be on site that day. If anyone would like to consign something, give Walter (218-689-3373) or Rusty Billberg (218-469-1215) a call. In addition to his new auctioneering business, Walter also farms and has his own registered Hereford cattle operation, WJ Herefords. His girlfriend, Josie Dallman, works alongside him on the farm and has her own cattle, too. Josie will also be taking care of the clerk and cashier duties for WJ Auction Service, while finishing her degree in Ag Business at Valley City State University. If you are interested in booking WJ Auction Service for your next sale, don't hesitate to call or email Walter at 218-689-3373 or walterjon08@gmail.com. WJ Auction Service is licensed, bonded and insured. "So from that boy who went to school, there grew a man who played it cool. He came back home a full-fledged auctioneer. Then the people came from miles around just to hear him make that rhythmic sound that filled their hearts with such a happy cheer." - Lyrics from Leroy Van Dyke's "Auctioneer" song

• SIMPLY DELICIOUS

By Kari Sundberg, Eagle Editor

Twice Baked Cauliflower

6 slices bacon or small bag of precooked bacon bits.

1 large head of cauliflower Salt & Pepper

1/2 cup sour cream

4 oz. cream cheese

1/4 cup parmesan cheese/ any shredded cheese of choice

1/4 cup chopped green onions, plus extra for garnish

1 teaspoon garlic powder or 1-2 cloves fresh garlic, pressed

1 cup cheddar cheese

Fry the bacon in a large skillet over medium heat. Transfer to a paper-towel lined plate. Allow to cool and then chop. Core the cauliflower and chop the florets into small pieces.

In a large pot of boiling salted water, boil the cauliflower until soft (Or use your instant pot to steam the cauliflower, instructions in the post above).

15-18 minutes for a chunkier texture or 20-22 minutes for a super smooth texture. In a large mixing bowl, combine the sour cream, cream cheese, parmesan cheese, green onions, garlic powder, and two-thirds of the bacon. Preheat oven to 350 degrees Drain cauliflower well, then pour the cauliflower over the cream cheese mixture in the bowl. Mash with a potato masher or whisk until it is the consistency of your liking. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spread the cauliflower mixture evenly in a 3 qt. casserole dish. Top with the cheddar cheese and remaining bacon. Bake for 15-20 minutes, until the cheese is melted. Garnish with chopped green onions.

Strategic Farming: Field Notes talked soybean condition and crop disease

By: Phyllis Bongard, UMN Extension

The drought affects crop conditions as well as the potential for disease development. Dr. Seth Naeve, Extension soybean agronomist, traveled Minnesota recently assessing the soybean crop. Despite the drought, soybeans are looking reasonably good. However, we are living "paycheck to paycheck" in terms of soil moisture and need rain for the crop to develop and yield.

After an early, dry spring, excessive rain at planting was followed by an early shut down of rain, resulting in a perfect storm. The drought and its related plant stress is the primary challenge. Iron deficiency chlorosis (IDC), which affects a large portion of acreage, is a second challenge.

Naeve observed that IDC-affected fields have expanded and are looking worse this year. He's also seen IDC in areas, like south-central Minnesota, where it normally is not an issue. Drought and other plant stressors, such as herbicide and nitrogen carryover, contribute to IDC's increase.

Increasing plant populations, a recommended practice for managing IDC, has helped decrease severity to some degree, but iron chelate applications have shown greater effectiveness.

Planting an IDC tolerant variety is a core recommendation. However, with new herbicide-tolerant traits, some of the background genetics have changed, resulting in more IDC susceptibility in Minnesota varieties.

Unlike IDC, current conditions do not favor many soybean diseases. White mold should be non-existent under drought conditions, according to Dr. Dean Malvick, Extension plant pathologist. It requires relatively cool temperatures and wet conditions to develop, conditions that have been rare in Minnesota this summer.

Even under widespread drought, there may be areas in the state that have received adequate rains for white mold to develop. To manage the disease in high-risk fields, use resistant varieties and fungicide applications when conditions favor development. Fungicide applications are used to prevent infection at growth stages R1 to R2, rather than to stop it.

Charcoal rot, on the other hand, is favored by hot and dry conditions. While the disease is present in the state, it has never caused much concern. It's named for the black pepper-like specks that can be seen in the lower stem or root when the stem is split. If you suspect charcoal rot, please send pictures to Malvick (dmalvick@umn.edu) to help determine how widespread this disease is.

Tar spot of corn was first found in Minnesota in 2019. Since then, it has spread rapidly and been confirmed in 36 counties in southern and central Minnesota. Infection has not been confirmed in the state yet this year.

Tar spot is favored by moderate temperatures, high humidity and leaf wetness. Under the right conditions, an infection can develop from a few spots to a fully involved leaf in a matter of a few weeks.

Corn leaves tend to have a lot of black spots, not all from tar spot. Frass can be mistaken for tar spot, but it can be rubbed off, unlike tar spot. Tar spot lesions are usually elongated and they also go through the entire leaf, with the spot visible on both leaf surfaces.

Start scouting in July to assess where and when tar spot is developing. Risk assessment also plays a role. For example, if tar spot is in a new field in an area where it's never been documented, risk of severe disease is low. However, if the field is in southeastern Minnesota, that risk level is higher, especially if weather conditions are favorable.

Fungicide can be effective, but it needs to be applied when the epidemic starts. While it won't eliminate tar spot, it can significantly suppress it and preserve yield. If needed, fungicides should be applied between VT (tasseling) and R3 (milk stage). Malvick has seen no data that supports initial applications after R3.

Naeve and Malvick agreed that fungicide after hail is useful only if fungal diseases are developing. In soybean, diseases enhanced by hail aren't managed effectively by fungicides. In corn, Goss' Wilt and smut can develop, neither of which is controlled by fungicides.

Thanks to the Minnesota Corn Growers Research and Promotion Council and the Minnesota Soybean Research and Promotion Council for their generous support of this program!

Roseau County Fair 4-H Projects & Livestock Show

All of these little snap shots were too cute not to share! Jett Anderson is just 3 years old and really had a great time at the fair this year! His dad shared, “Jett has been waiting and waiting to show his calf Whip Cream at the fair. Today was the day! He waited very (im)patiently all day for his time to lead her around the show ring. He ended up getting 1st place in the Heifer calf Open Class and Overall Open Class Reserve Champion! Pretty impressive for a 3 year old!” Photos courtesy of Robbie Anderson

The other Anderson kids also had a great time at the fair! For their 4H General Exhibit projects, Presley made a mosaic cross from beans and paint, and made dehydrated apple rings from her Great Grandma Carol's recipe. Briggs built a Lego Triceratops and colored a hunting picture from a story his dad told him about the first buck he shot. They are both Cloverbuds in 4H, so they received participation ribbons. But then all three Anderson kids showed their calves in the Open Class. Jett (mentioned above) got first place in the Open Class Heifer Calf division, Presley got second. Then they went back into the show ring for Overall Open Class divisions and Jett got Reserve Champion in that. Photos courtesy of Robbie Anderson

Walter Jones received Grand Champion Breeding Heifer and Grand Champion Senior Showmanship. He also had his steer purchased by the Grygla Merchants in the Roseau County 4-H Blue Ribbon Market Livestock Auction.

More photos of Kember and her brother's 4H entries will be shared in next week's paper.

Thanks to the parents who submitted their kids' 4H photos and information to the paper. It is appreciated.
