Grygla man sentenced for possessing child pornography

(The following press release contains graphic information. Reader discretion is advised.)

A Grygla man was sentenced Thursday, Sept. 1, in U.S. District Court for possessing child pornography.

Keith Allen Barsness, 64, was sentenced to 120 months in prison followed by 10 years of supervised re-lease, according to U.S. Attorney Andrew M. Luger. He is required to register as a predatory offender.

Barsness pled guilty to the charge in January. A mug shot wasn't available. Barsness had previously been convicted of similar charges in 2009. According to court documents, the latest charge stemmed from a late 2021 report to law enforcement from Google. It reported that suspected images of child pornography were uploaded to a Google Drive associated with Barsness' email address.

In early 2022, law enforcement executed a search warrant to review the Google Drive and "confirmed that many of the suspected images, in fact, depicted child pornography, including victims previously identified by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children." On April 20, 2022, law enforcement executed a search warrant at Barsness' home, seizing multiple electronic communication devices and multiple electronic storage devices. They found at least 54 files depicting images or videos of child pornography.

The NCMEC reviewed the files, finding 20 files that contained images/videos of previously identified child victims. Some depicted children under the age of 12 and "depictions of sadistic and/or masochistic acts with a minor, including vaginal and oral intercourse." In particular, Barsness was charged with possessing two images on Nov. 28, 2021, that were transported online. Those images included one image of a nude prepubescent girl positioned in an exhibitionist manner and another image depicting two nude minors viewing a laptop screen containing an image of a prepubescent girl engaged in sexual intercourse with a man.

Barsness told law enforcement that he had searched for and viewed child pornography online for years. He admitted he had uploaded child pornography to his Google Drive account and he had downloaded other images of child pornography from the internet.

He said he was attracted to girls under the age of 18. The charging document indicated that Barsness had been previously convicted of two counts of possession of child pornography in Marshall County District Court in 2009.

Grygla Blood Drive Brings in 40 volunteers

The Grygla community hosted a blood drive with Vitalant on August 22 at the Grygla Community Center which helped collect a total of 45 units of blood products for patients in need.

A total of 40 individuals volunteered to donate blood and 34 individuals were able to successfully donate at the Vitalant blood drive. A total of six donors also came forward to donate Power Red Cells (2RBC) which collects two units of red blood cells while returning platelets, plasma and a saline solution back to the donor. There was one person who volunteered for the first time!

Vitalant expressed their gratitude to Julie Sparby, who coordinated the drive, and the Grygla Lions which sponsored the blood drive, as well as others who assisted with the drive: Mildred Klamar, Leann Wikert, Laurie Polansky, and Ruth Anderson.

The need for blood is constant and Vitalant strives to always keep a 5-day supply of every blood type on the shelf to be able to meet the needs of patients across the region. Trauma and burn patients, premature infants, heart surgery patients, organ transplant recipients and people fighting cancer all require blood transfusions for their care. Blood donations are needed daily to maintain a strong blood supply and meet ongoing patient needs.

Vitalant encourages healthy individuals to make blood donation a part of one's regular routine to help meet the ongoing needs. Donors can make a convenient appointment to give blood at www.donors.vitalant.org or by calling 877-25-VITAL. With each donation, donors receive a free total cholesterol test and earn reward points.

Blood donation takes about an hour from check-in to refreshments, while the blood draw typically taking less than 10 minutes. Donors can save about 20 minutes by completing their Health History Questionnaire the day they donate on www.vitalant.org/health

POW/MIA Recognition Day

Submitted by the Grygla American Legion Auxiliary (Cathy Newton, Member)

The third Friday in September is National POW/MIA Recognition Day. Please take a moment to remember those who are lost but never forgotten.

POW/MIA Recognition Day honors the commitments and the sacrifices made by our nation's prisoners of war and those who are still missing in action. This Day is one of the six days specified by law on which the black POW/MIA flag shall be flown over federal facilities and cemeteries, post offices and military installations. By custom, it is on the third Friday in September.

How many POW MIA are still missing?

Our research and operational missions involve coordination with hundreds of countries and municipalities worldwide. As of the latest update on May 22, 2023, more than 81,000 Americans remain missing from WWII, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, the Cold War, and the Gulf Wars/other conflicts.

POW/MIA Timeline

Here are some of the highlights of our nation's attempts to recover our Prisoner Of War/ Missing In Action (POW/MIA) servicemembers during the past several decades:

1953 – During Operation Big Switch, 3,597 American Prisoners Of War are returned after the Korean War.

1954 – The remains of 1,868 American servicemembers of the Korean War are returned home during Operation Glory.

1967 – Several women form the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia to raise awareness about POWs during the Vietnam War. It is incorporated in 1970.

1971 – Grahme Wilkin proposes a flag as a symbol of U.S. POW/MIAs.

1973 – The Paris Peace Accords of 1973 lead to the release of 591 American POWs from the Vietnam War during Operation Homecoming. Also in 1973, the Department of Defense establishes the Central Identification Laboratory-Thailand to coordinate POW/MIA recovery efforts.

1982 – For the first time, the POW/MIA flag, originally designed by Newt Heisley, is flown over the White House.

1985 – During the 67th American Legion National Convention, attendees designate a resolution for the POW/ MIA Empty Chair setting at all official meetings of The American Legion.

1990 – The 101st Congress passes a law recognizing the POW/MIA flag as a symbol of the nation's commitment to POW/MIAs.

2013 – President Barack Obama issues a proclamation declaring the third Friday of September as National POW/ MIA Recognition Day. It fell on Sept. 15 in 2017.

2015 – The U.S. Department of Defense creates the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency to recover and account for missing servicemembers from past conflicts. It replaces the Defense POW/Missing Personnel Office and the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command.

Only in Minnesota: a weekly feature in the Eagle

The train ride through the Minnesota countryside that shows off fall foliage

One of the best ways to immerse yourself in the beauty of autumn in the Land of 10,000 Lakes is a fall foliage train ride in Minnesota, along the Mississippi River, and through the state's Bluff Country. You can keep your eyes on the trees and leave the driving to the engineer.

To get started, all you need to do is reserve a ticket on Amtrak's Empire Builder from St. Paul to Winona. You can get a seat for between $25 and $30 each way. Check Amtrak's timetables for the most up to date schedules and fares.

From St. Paul, you'll travel along the Mississippi, through Hastings, to Red Wing. This is where the ride really starts to get interesting, as the train will begin rolling through the heart of Bluff Country as soon as it pulls away from Red Wing's station. Over the remaining few hours of the trip, you'll ride between the river and its towering, forested bluffs.

Just outside Red Wing, you'll cruise past Frontenac State Park and into Lake City. From there, the tracks skirt Lake Pepin all the way into Wabasha, offering dramatic fall scenery from both sides of the train - along the Minnesota bluffs and across the river to Wisconsin's Driftless Area.

On the Minnesota side, much of the train ride will pass through the Upper Mississippi National Wildlife and Fish Refuge, as well as the Richard J. Dorer Memorial Hardwood State Forest, so you'll enjoy all the best bursts of color while passing through largely undeveloped stretches of hardwood forest.

Then you'll roll into Winona. Spend some time exploring the town, and grab a bite to eat - you'll have several hours before your return train heads back to the Cities. Better still, book a room and make it a weekend adventure!

What do you think - does a build-your-own fall foliage train trip sound fun to you?

Minnesota DNR shares when to expect fall colors, where to enjoy them

To celebrate Minnesota's most colorful season, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is sharing a fall color forecast, typical timing of peak colors, ways for Minnesotans to find where colors are at their peak each week, and suggestions for where to visit to see fall colors.

Fall colors in Minnesota typically peak in mid-to-late-September through mid-October, starting in the northernmost part of the state and working southward. Peak fall color usually lasts two weeks but can vary widely depending on location and weather.

Many factors play into the timing and brilliance of the fall color season in Minnesota, such as day length, temperatures and rainfall. Weather impacts fall colors both before and during the fall season.

"Brilliant fall color occurs when late summer and early fall days are sunny, nights are chilly and there is adequate rainfall throughout the growing season," said Brian Schwingle, Minnesota DNR forest health specialist.

Leaves change color mainly in response to the decrease of daily sunlight. Photosynthesis, or the production of sugars that depend on sunlight, begins to slow down in response to shortening days. This leads to a reduction of chlorophyll, the pigment that supports photosynthesis and gives leaves their green color. When chlorophyll is reduced, other color pigments in the leaves begin to show, like yellow and red.

Patterns of temperature, precipitation, wind, and the timing of hard freezes can impact when fall colors peak and how long they last. While a light frost might intensify colors, a hard freeze can cause trees to drop leaves early. Rain and wind can shorten the peak color period. These weather phenomena can only be predicted a week or so in advance, making a peak color forecast difficult.

Minnesota is in its third summer with drought conditions in at least part of the state. Though severe summer drought may lessen the intensity of fall colors, there has been no correlation to the timing of peak fall colors and drought.

"Temperatures in September have played a bigger role than drought in determining when peak colors form," Schwingle said. "When September minimum temperatures are cooler than average, like we had in 2020, fall colors have been earlier."

The Minnesota DNR's Fall Color Finder (mndnr.gov/fall-colors) is a way for the public to follow the annual progression of fall color change throughout the state. Minnesota DNR staff throughout the state share reports from their location each Wednesday, in time for people to make travel plans for the coming weekend. The popular webpage includes a color-coded map that shows the approximate percentage of leaves that have changed color across the state, and a slideshow of recent photos taken by staff and visitors. The public is also welcome to submit their photos from visits to state parks, forests, and trails, which might be included in online galleries, social media or newsletters.

"Fall is the perfect season to spend time outdoors, when nature puts on a beautiful show for all to see," said Ann Pierce, Minnesota DNR Parks and Trails Division director. "From the north woods to the prairies to the lakeshores and everything in between, there are so many spots to view the stunning scenery that autumn in Minnesota brings. We invite everyone to follow along with our Fall Color Finder and get out to Minnesota state parks, trails and forests and other public lands this season."

Next week, the Minnesota DNR launches its weekly fall color update newsletter with trip planning resources. From scenic drives to hiking, biking, paddling, birding, picnicking and more, the Minnesota DNR offers itineraries and tips to encourage Minnesotans to get out and enjoy the changing leaves. In addition, subscribers can learn more about the plants and wildlife they may encounter while chasing fall colors. To subscribe, visit the Fall Color Finder (mndnr.gov/fallcolors) to sign up for weekly email or text updates.
